About

Prior to coming to the Bar, Sophie Crampton worked for almost two years as a paralegal for Hornby and Levy Solicitors, a specialist family law firm based in South London. During her time there, she worked on a variety of cases involving different areas of family law, including TOLATA, child abduction, and Schedule 1 of the Children's Act 1989, gaining valuable experience and insight into the legal profession.

Practice overview

Sophie specialises in care and adoption proceedings, representing local authorities, parents and children. She has been involved in a variety of complex matters such as cases involving children traveling unaccompanied from abroad, children struggling with their sexuality or gender identity and cases involving foreign embassies.

Sophie has successfully navigated a myriad of complex threshold matters, representing both the local authority and parents. Her comprehensive understanding of these matters is evident in her book, which delves into the elements of threshold, offering practical guidance on drafting and responding.

Sophie's passion for psychology is evident in her work, particularly in cases involving complex mental health issues. Her experience extends to representing children who have been sectioned under the Mental Health Act 1983, showcasing her deep understanding of these sensitive matters.

Sophie has experience of seeking High Court orders, including Deprivation of Liberty orders, recovery orders and orders under inherent jurisdiction.

Sophie is part of the Young Bar Advocate Executive Committee, which aims to support young barristers to take on pro bono work. Sophie is also a Panel Member of Advocate, formerly the Bar Pro Bono Unit, which provides free legal representation to clients who are not eligible for legal aid and cannot afford representation.

While studying for the BPTC, Sophie also volunteered at the Personal Support Unit. In this role, she provided invaluable support to litigants in person in both the Royal Courts of Justice and the Central Family Court, demonstrating her commitment to ensuring access to justice for all, regardless of their financial means.
