'It is always a pleasure instructing Polly. She is professional and clearly dedicated to giving the best representation to her clients, whether parents or professional clients. She is incredibly knowledgeable and gives great advice and guidance. She is personable and approachable which makes it enjoyable working with her.' Amy Woolfenden, Solicitor & Director, Beck Fitzgerald, 2024

About

Polly Allison joined chambers after the successful completion of her pupillage. Prior to coming to the Bar, she worked as a legal assistant in a successful law firm specialising in mental capacity law. Her work there was highly regarded, and she also volunteered at the National Centre for Domestic Violence.

Practice overview

Polly Allison's thriving family law practice is diverse, focusing on public law Children Act proceedings. Her extensive experience in this area reassures clients of her competence and dedication. She regularly represents parents, local authorities, and guardians, and has appeared in all levels of the family court. Polly's practice includes cases involving non-accidental injuries, neglect, substance misuse, mental health, physical abuse, and domestic violence.

Polly's practice is broad and balanced, representing both applicants and respondents in private law proceedings. This approach ensures that all parties receive fair and balanced representation, enhancing the trust and confidence of her clients.
